In the afternoon R. Elango, a Dalit leader turning his village into a Model village in India, has given a thought provoking speech on ‘Trust on transformation and guidance’.

- Here is a small story about his achievement.He was inspired by the idea of the then PM Rajiv Gandhi, who promoted the idea of ‘Panchayat Raj’ to give full freedom to village Panchayat. Later in 1992, NarasimhaRao Government passed the 73rd Amendment in the Parliament to implement Panchayat Raj in the entire country. The first elections were held in 1996 for Panchayats, based on the new Act. Since nobody was willing to contest election to become the President of the Kuthambakkam village, he resigned his Government job to contest the elections.
- In the 1996 Panchayat election, he was elected by the villagers with a three-fourth majority to become the first President of the village under the new Act. Panchayat Raj Act gave powers to the villagers for self governance. He started implementing word by word the guidelines given in the Act.
- He visited many model villages across the country and developed a model for his village. He brought peace between the warring casts. The illicit liquor was totally eradicated through persuasion. He brought transparency in the village administration. The first Gram Sabha was constituted as per the Act with full powers.
- Since he brought transparency in the administration, many of the contractors and the Government officials did not like his way of functioning. On some flimsy grounds, he was suspended in 1998 by the then Collector. As the Collector read out the charges before the Gram Sabha, the entire village stood by Mr Elango, rejected the charges completely. He was reinstated by the Government as the President. After this incident, the Government realised his potential.
- In 2000, for the first time in India, he built 50 twin houses in a single colony called ‘Samathuvapuram’ (Place for equality). In every twin house, one dalit and one non dalit lived. This scheme was later adopted by the Tamilnadu Government and extended to the entire State.
- During the first five years, he made a lot of transformation in the village, including creating opportunities for employment generation and education. In 2001 Panchayatelection, he was elected unopposed by the villagers. During his second term, he completed all the unfinished works and placed his village in the Indian map as a Model village.

3. The young generation must understand the needs and requirements of self and body.
4. They also should understand the harmony in 4 levels (individual, Family, Society & Nature) and trust in the relationship.
5. This programme ensures the transformation of young generation.
